

19th PCI London: Mission impossible?

3rd July, 2019, London

The challenge of continuous PCI DSS compliance

How to meet the key technical and organizational issues created by the Standard

PCI London 2019: Time for a new approach?

PCI DSS presents a unique challenge to compliance professionals. The technical complexity of the Standard, and the granular understanding of both business and technology processes required to implement it, impose a huge burden on organisations of all sizes as digitalization of payments and commerce in general accelerates.

The detail in the Standard, in contrast to the vague, principles-based approach in key data privacy legislation, places huge emphasis on tracking and monitoring access, access automation and control, ensuring effective segmentation and scoping and security testing. This means that PCI DSS compliance makes specific demands across a range of key enterprise technologies and processes.

The problems for any compliance function faced with this level of complexity are manifold: does the compliance function have the required level of technical expertise? If not, does internal IT and is compliance the right team to liaise with them? And if not, who are the right people to interpret the Standard for the organisation, engage third-party help, and evaluate and buy the complex solutions needed for compliance?

And what kind of compliance function is equipped to monitor and test continued compliance? The difficulty is reflected in the fact that most companies review compliance just once a year – meaning that they do not comply most of the time. The difficulties are enormous, so what is the right approach and who in the enterprise should be held accountable?

The 19th PCI London will look at the latest in the processes and technologies used to protect payment and personal data.

There will be real-life case studies, strategic talks and technical break-out sessions from PCI teams behind some of the world's most admired brands, who know, just like you, that payment security is now more important to business than ever.

Key themes: PCI DSS and compliance professionals need your help ...

1

With tracking and monitoring access

Access management is a critical component of PCI DSS compliance. This element of the Standard is a common point of control weakness and requires continuous monitoring as staff and devices change. So which solutions make the grade?

4

With cost-effective testing

“Security testing retains its traditional place at the bottom of the PCI DSS compliance list in terms of full compliance” in the Verizon report. But it is clearly a critical component of ensuring effectiveness and maintaining compliance. Demonstrate your expertise.

2

With access automation and control

The importance and complexity of access management cries out for an automated solution. But network and application role provisioning and entitlement reviews are already complex so what are the best ways to achieve this?

5

With API-related compliance issues

The world of payments is in flux. Cards are physical, they exist in wallets, they can generate virtual cards and the channels through which card data flows are changing too. One area of concern is API security. Is it an issue and can you help??

With smart segmentation and scoping

Implementing a separate PCI network from their current “flat” network can be a daunting task because of the scale and complexity of an organization, and the associated cost. What approaches can help companies with this?

6

With automated compliance solutions

Define your configuration as code and then automatically monitor and correct against it. It sounds simple. But is it? And is this type of solution useful for professionals trying to apply PCI policies across all systems? Demonstrate your expertise.
